

Hailey Lazzaroni

Hailey Lazzaroni joined the South Florida Regional Planning Council in May 2022 serving as a Regional Planning and Resilience Intern before transitioning to her role as Regional Planner in February 2023. While her internship involved stakeholder outreach, policy and planning research, and data collection and analysis, her work now consists of planning resilience and mobility projects as well as providing GIS Support to the council. Prior to SFRPC, Hailey worked closely with the community at an environmental research hub, helping raise awareness of local resilience efforts to weather extremes including but not limited to flooding and heat waves.

Ms. Lazzaroni is a born-and-raised Floridian who received her Bachelor of Arts Degree in Sustainability and the Environment from Florida International University in 2021. She will graduate with her Master of Science Degree in Environmental Studies in May of 2023. In addition to her educational background, Hailey has served on a weekly basis in her church's production ministry since 2017.
